Description:
During this workshop, participants will learn techniques to assist with teacher generative vocabulary strategies to English Language Learners (ELLs). The goal of effective morphological instruction for ELL’s is to identify meaningful English word parts that learners can combine to generate multiple related words commonly used in school. This workshop will include instructional protocols for teaching the most commonly used prefixes and suffixes, teaching word combining forms used in academic content areas, and teaching word segmentation.

Learner Outcomes:
Participants will be able to:

• List the steps for introducing and practicing generative strategies for ELLs.
• Describe differentiation in vocabulary instruction for ELLs based on the Key Uses of Academic Language descriptors.
• Identify three resources for finding further information and instructional materials for generative vocabulary lessons.
